CHALLENGES FOR FRESH GRADUATES

1. Lack of Working Experience

Fresh graduates may find it difficult to get hired because many employers prefer candidates who already have internship, project, or workplace experience.

2. Skills Gap

Some graduates may have academic knowledge but lack practical workplace skills such as communication, teamwork, problem-solving, digital skills, and industry-specific technical skills.

3. High Job Market Competition

Fresh graduates compete with many other graduates for entry-level positions. In Malaysia, the number of graduates reached 5.98 million in 2024, showing that the graduate job market is competitive.

4. Changing Job Requirements

Employers are looking for updated skills because job roles are changing quickly. The World Economic Forum reported that employers expect 39% of workers' core skills to change by 2030, and skill gaps are considered a major barrier by many employers.

GAIN INTERNSHIP EXPERIENCE

Internships help fresh graduates apply classroom knowledge in real workplace situations. They also help students understand workplace culture, improve confidence, and gain useful industry exposure.

BUILD A CAREER PORTFOLIO

A career portfolio shows real evidence of a graduate's abilities. It can include university projects, coding work, designs, certificates, achievements, or reports that prove the candidate's skills.

EARN RELEVANT CERTIFICATIONS

Certifications show that graduates have extra knowledge beyond their degree. They can help improve technical skills in areas such as AI, programming, data analytics, Microsoft tools, or digital skills.

SKILLS & EXPERIENCE

JOIN PROJECTS & PRACTICAL ACTIVITIES

University projects, competitions, volunteering, part-time jobs, or freelance work help students develop teamwork, communication, problem-solving, and hands-on experience.

"Experience is the teacher of all things"— "Skills and experience help fresh graduates become more prepared, confident, and competitive in the workplace."

Personal Branding & Soft Skills

"Personal branding is your professional reputation — what people say about you when you're not in the room... it's about owning your story, showcasing your value, and building authentic relationships." (Sharma, 2025)
